REORGANIZATION IN NEXT CONGRESS

Coupled With Republican Contest Over Successor to Coolidge Is Determined Fight for Younger Leaders.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 17.—Reorganization of the Republican leadership in the next congress will lead to a determined fight to place "young blood" in control, even at the cost of an intra-party battle according to reports at the capital today. If insurgent movements are successful, there will be a complete shake-up of Republican leadership in the senate with younger men placed in charge of the party's executive program.

In the house, through the defeat of former Republican Leader Mondell of Wyoming, similar changes are expected.

The senate fight will revolve around the election of a president to succeed Calvin Coolidge as permanent presiding officer. With the post paying $12,500 a year—$5,000 more than a senator's salary—is a widely sought political plum. In addition, it gives its occupant the distinction of outranking the cabinet at all social and diplomatic affairs.

Senator Cummins, Republican, of Iowa, president pro-tem in the last session, undoubtedly will be a candidate again, although he previously announced his determination not to run. Booms meanwhile have been launched in behalf of Senators Curtis, Republican of Kansas; Jones, Republican, of Washington; Lenroot, Republican, of Wisconsin, and Wadsworth, Republican, of New York. Friends of each senator are urging his selection and as a result, the Republican caucus at which the post is to be filled, may develop into a free for all political battle.

At the same time, Republican insurgents, are suggesting the retirement of Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, as Republican leader, and the selection of a younger man to head the party in the senate. As Lodge has a powerful following, a second plan is suggested for naming an assistant floor leader to direct the party in all debate, thus relieving Lodge of the leadership's most arduous tasks.

Strong party leaders are mentioning Senator "Jim" Watson, of Indiana; Wadsworth, of New York, and Lenroot, of Wisconsin, for this post, with Watson apparently having the "inside track." If Lodge should retire, a dual leadership may be arranged with Watson and Wadsworth sharing the honors.

If Senator Curtis should be chosen president of the senate, another fight will develop over the naming of his successor as Republican "whip." Among the names mentioned for this post, if Curtis wins higher honors, are Senators Wadsworth, McNary, of Oregon; Reed, of Pennsylvania, and Lenroot of Wisconsin. There will be no opposition to the re-election of Curtis if he does not obtain the senate's presidency.

When he was arraigned in city court this morning before Judge Schirick it was brought out that John, who has a most engaging smile, came into this city from Rifton, where he is employed, in the company of some fellow workers. Before they reached the city John, who had never touched a drop of liquor before in his life, was induced to take a drink by his companions. From that time on John didn't know what happened. He faintly remembers buying some clothes in this city and leaving them at some house. However he can't recall where he left them. John is a native of Philadelphia and he says that just as soon as he gets things straightened out he is going back to his native city. Judge Schirick after listening to his story imposed a fine of $5 but suspended payment on condition that John get back to work at once.

WASHINGTON PACTS IN EFFECT

Scrap Many of World's Big Warships and Assure Peace in Pacific For at Least Ten Years—Simple Ceremonies as Ratifications Are Filed.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 17.—The most important international accomplishment of the Harding administration—the conclusion of treaties under which the great powers of the world agreed to scrap most of their big warships and to maintain peace in the Pacific for at least ten years, has been consummated.

The four power Pacific treaty of the Washington armament conference between the United States, Great Britain, France and Japan, which provides simultaneously for the termination of the Anglo-Japanese alliance of 1911, and the five power naval treaty between these four nations and Italy, went into effect at noon today with the formal deposit of ratifications at the state department.

The naval treaty remains in force until December 31, 1936, and the Pacific treaty until August 17, 1933, but both agreements will continue in effect indefinitely unless one of the contracting powers gives notice of intention to withdraw at the end of the specified period.

In the words of the late President Harding, spoken at the conclusion of the Washington conference, these treaties have "inspired a new hope for the world" because they "mark the beginning of a new and better epoch in human progress."

Simple ceremonies in the diplomatic rooms at the state department marked the deposit of ratifications.

HUGHES'S ANNOUNCEMENT IS HAILED IN BRITAIN

As Indicating Less Aloof Attitude Toward Europe.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Aug. 17.—The Daily Express stated today that, unless the French change their reparations attitude, Great Britain intends to establish her own commission to investigate Germany's capacity for payment and to fix the amount of indemnity Berlin can pay. Then, according to the Daily Express, England will bring pressure upon the other allies to have them accept the figures of the British commission.

Reports from Paris say Premier Poincare is conciliatory. News that the French have completed their reply bears out these reports. The French have made unexpected speed in constructing their answer. Foreign office officials had expected it would take Paris about two weeks to make reply.

One report was current that Premier Poincare may consent to withdrawal from the Ruhr if the Allies guarantee control of German resources. There was another report that Premier Baldwin would confer with Premier Poincare, but this was officially denied.

Secretary Hughes's action in notifying American embassies that United States is willing to participate in an international commission of experts to fix the exact amount of indemnity Germany can and must pay, was received joyfully in official circles. It was accepted as an indication that President Coolidge favors modified participation by America in settling Europe's troubles.

MINERS AND OPERATORS IN FINAL EFFORT TO FIND AGREEMENT BASIS

Commission Brings Them Into Joint Session For First Time Since July 27—Will Report To Commission Tonight—If No Progress Both Will State Cases To President.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 17.—In a last effort to save "a hopeless situation" the United States coal commission today brought together representatives of the anthracite coal operators and miners in a joint session and directed them to make a final effort to reach an agreement that will avert a strike in the anthracite coal fields September 1.

The full committees of the operators and miners went into the joint session the first since they broke off negotiations July 27 at Atlantic City to discuss their differences among themselves and reply to the commission by 8 o'clock tonight.

The commission did not participate in the conference.

The joint conference adjourned following a session of about an hour, until 2:30 this afternoon. Both the miners and operators will hold separate sessions in the meanwhile until the joint meeting will be resumed.

New York, Aug. 17.—Both sides in the anthracite coal controversy were preparing today to lay their cases before President Coolidge.

Whether their representations to the White House are to be made through the United States Coal Commission, which is now expected to report to the president anyway, or whether each side will lay its case before the president independently was not formally announced, but there were reports about the conference chambers that the latter action might be expected.

Conference between the commission and the miners, headed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and the operators, headed by Samuel D. Warriner, of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, apparently were without effect and failed to bring the warring sides together.

The coal commission went into executive session and was understood to be considering the advisability of having each faction lay its side of the controversy directly before the president.

It was reported, according to both delegations, that the commission might recommend such action on the theory that the dispute had gotten beyond available conciliation agencies and should be brought before the tribunal of public opinion through the president himself.

Operators' and miners' delegations waited this morning in opposite ends of an ante-room to the chamber where the members of the coal commission were assembled, prepared to again hear each side.

Lewis had a lengthy statement, outlining the miners' position, which he said would be handed to the commission. The operators were putting the finishing touches to similar statement.

In the event no agreement is reached today, which seemed extremely likely, it was understood both sides would then formally ask that their statements be laid before the president.

Lewis announced he would make the miners' statement public some time today. Warriner said he would ask the commission's consent to make public the operators' proposition.

The contending factions indicated they would also take steps to present their respective sides of the case directly to the president.

It was apparent that neither the operators nor the miners hold hope of an agreement.

Sitting outside the door of the room where the commission was in executive session, Lewis declared to the group about him:

"This reminds me of Nero sitting on the parapet fiddling while Rome burned."

"It looks as if we will have to pack up and go home without any agreement" he added.

Another statement of the hopelessness of the situation, as viewed by the miners, came from Rinaldo Cappelini, district president of the United Mine Workers and one of the miners' delegation.

"The situation was bad enough before we came here" he said. "But as we are now, God knows the operators know what we want and we know what they want. It looks like a lot of beating about the bush.

"Statements, in language that a Philadelphia lawyer could not interpret will not keep the mines running after September 1".

"And if there is no new contract the mines will not run after September 1", Lewis reiterated.

New York, Aug. 17.—With Chairman John Hays Hammond, of the United States coal commission declaring this morning the outlook is "encouraging" the operators and miners resumed today to examine their conference with the commission in a final effort to reach an agreement that would enable them to enter into negotiations for a new contract.

Failure of the conferees to get together on the one issue at issue has made more imminent the threat of a strike of 155,000 miners in the anthracite coal fields on September 1.

"Up to this time no progress has been made" said Hammond as the commission prepared to go into session with the operators at 9 o'clock this morning, an hour earlier than previous opening conferences.

Unless the commission is able to find a way to break the deadlock today the members will leave for Washington and report the status of the controversy to President Coolidge and await orders.

It was understood that the operators this morning would ask the commission to state definitely to the public the issues involved. Those in close touch with the situation doubted that the commission would comply with this request without having first given an explanation of the entire controversy to the president.

The deadlock between the operators and the miners once more pivoted about the "check-off" system. The break came after the way apparently had been paved to negotiations which were expected to lead to a peaceful settlement between the two factions.

At the miners' first meeting with the commission they presented the following proposition: If the operators would discontinue their practice of checking off (taking out of the miners pay envelopes) bills owed the company for house rent, fuel bills, hospital assessments, tool accounts, etc., the miners, in turn would abandon their demand for the check-off of pay (the plan by which the mine owner takes out of each miner's pay monthly $1 for union dues and the assessment levied against the member by his local.)

The operators answered in a five paragraph communication to the commission, which, according Samuel D. Warriner, operators' leader, was a "full acceptance" of the miners' proposition.

John L. Lewis, international union president, announced an unofficial acceptance, in which he said: "The road is paved to a reopening of negotiations." Hours later Lewis suddenly announced he had found five "jokers" in the operators' reply.

"We made an honest proposition—stated it in writing," Lewis said this morning. "The operators have tried to write a trick letter prepared by a trick union-busting lawyer. We will not accept their reply to our offer."

Warriner said:

"Lewis is quibbling on words. The fact of the matter is the union made what they thought would be a proposition the operators could not accept. We did accept it. Lewis was caught. Now he's trying to hedge out of his own proposition."

Gloom hung over the headquarters of both factions. At the miners' headquarters it was said "the situation looks bad."

The emphatic statement was made that "the miners will not arbitrate" and that "unless a new contract is signed and sealed by midnight August 31, no coal will be dug in the anthracite fields."

STONE DESCRIBES THE DRUG EVIL

To Kiwanians—100,000 in U. S. Who Cannot Be Cured—Moral and Religious Training Almost Sure Preventive.

A. Stone of the A. Stone Foundation, addressed the Kiwanis Club on the narcotic drug traffic at the Thursday luncheon at the Y. M. C. A. Many wild estimates, he said, were made of the number of addicts in the United States, varying from 1,000,000 to 5,000,000. Even if the lower were correct it was a terrible thing to have one out of each one hundred population a slave to drugs as there was no cure for a confirmed addict.

Mr. Stone said that he had devoted years of his own time and much money to research among drug addicts, in the resorts of drug peddlers, in courts, newspaper offices and even in countries where the plants from which the drugs are obtained are grown and his own belief was that there are about 100,000 drug addicts in the United States. Among these he had found almost no men or women who had good moral influences in childhood and religious training in any denomination. Drug addicts have absolutely no religion, cannot be made to work, neglect all hygienic practices and become a slave to the one desire, never even changing his clothing or buying new unless compelled to. There are two varieties of drugs in most general use—cocaine and the derivatives of opium, usually heroin or morphine. The two latter are the more deadly and it takes an unusually strong constitution to use them steadily for more than a few years and survive. Where a physician prescribes usually in quantities of 1-6 to 1-8 grain, a hardened addict will take a grain at a dose.

After investigating all methods so far known for the cure for the drug habit, he had concluded there was none effective—that the use of drugs was a weakness of will and that those afflicted must be treated as patients with an incurable disease, similar to insanity. They never can become good citizens.

A pound of opium is worth wholesale $800. It sells to physicians and druggists at 10 cents a grain, or $50 an ounce; and while these prices prevail and there is a demand for it, smugglers will get in with enough to make trouble, since it is not bulky and the profit is huge.

A new product has been brought out, a synthetic preparation extracted from coal tar which is said to produce the effects of cocaine which will retail at one dollar a pound. Thus the remedy for the drug evil is not the suppression of the supply, which cannot be done, but moral force and religious training for children.

Dr. A. A. Stern secured the floor and said he endorsed all Mr. Stone had said, and then told of a conference he had attended where the report of the Rockefeller foundation fund work in narcotic control was read. Stations had been established in New Orleans and Los Angeles where addicts could obtain drugs at cost, under proper supervision, and the drug peddlers promptly left the cities. This was the best method, he believed of, of coping with the drug evil, as it would drive out of business the peddlers who made or encouraged new addicts.

Dr. A. C. Gates, president of the club, told of the red tape that was necessary for doctors or druggists to secure narcotic drugs and said that he believed conditions were improving. Formerly, whenever a carnival or circus came to town, doctors in that town had many requests from members or hangers-on of the show for drugs, but these had been reduced probably seventy-five per cent.

Charles Lasher won a handsome attendance prize donated by Judge J. M. Fowler.

A large size picture of the late President Harding, secured by Secretary Safford of the Y. M. C. A. for the club was ordered draped in mourning for the period that has been prescribed.

THE OFFICE CAT

By Jimino

One of the great mysteries of life is how a dear old lady driving her electric on the wrong side of the street expects a 5-ton truck to get out of her way and another is the meek manner in which it does.

Evidently all the queer names left over from the Pullman cars are used on apartment houses.

Every fellow to his job. Many a budding genius falls down flat when he attempts grafting.

If a man reaps what he sows, lots of people sowed weeds.

Toot! Toot! Toot!
If you toot your little toptер,
And then lay away your horn,
Within a week there's not a soul
Will know that you were born.

The man who tries to advertise
By short and sudden jerks,
Is the man who's always kicking
Because it never works.

The fellow who is on the job
A-humpin' every day,
And keeps forever at it,
Is the one who makes it pay.

But why should you worry over a little thing like money. You know the only difference between a millionaire and myself is that he's making his second million, and I'm making my first.

How did anything so tasteless as rice ever get to be known as a food product.

Recipe for success: First get acquainted with a successful man.

"I've got the dope this time," said the narcotic peddler to his customer.

It is a wise guy that marries her on her birthday, so he will have to remember but one important date each year.

Life is full of golden opportunities for doing those things we do not want to do.

A girl friend of our says she can tell all the jealous women by the way they answer the telephone calls for their husbands. The jealous ones ask, "Who is it calling, please," while the others simply say, "Just a minute—I'll call him."

Call a fellow "level-headed" and he's flattered. Call him a "flat head" and he gets riled. Inconsistency.

And by the way there are men who even go to church so they will not have to stay at home.

For the next newspaper contest, we suggest that a prize be offered for the most perfectly formed feet, the prize to be a pair of hand-forged arch supporters.

Another good way to cure the sleeping disease is to monkey with the stock market.

"I've had too much of you," said the sick as he gazed on the home brew.

PALENTOWN.

Palentown, Aug. 16. Mrs. Sarah Dymond is spending a week at Mohonk Mountain Rest.

Mr. and Mrs. William Beesmer from Sundown and Mrs. Jesse Shurter and children from Samsonville and Mrs. John Traver spent Sunday with Mrs. H. Traver. All enjoyed the day. Fricassee chicken for dinner and plenty of ice cream in the afternoon.

Mrs. William Gray has a number of city boarders.

Everett Brannen and family from Mohonk Spring Farm, have been spending a week with friends in this place.

People here are glad to learn that Miss Lulu Dewitt is home and getting along fine, following her operation for appendicitis.

John Traver and mother and William Beesmer and wife spent Monday in Kingston.

John Traver is helping the Miller brothers with their haying.

Cecil Gray from Greene county recently spent a short time with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moncean Gray, at this place.

Meaning Clear.

Richard had been ill, and although better now, was still in bed and required constant amusing. He called to his mother, but she happened to be busy and could not come, whereupon the lad began to sob as if his heart would break, wailing over and over again, "Nobody loves me but myself; nobody loves me but myself."

UNOFFICIAL ASSISTANTS

In recent decades most of our Presidents have had a close personal friend who served as adviser and practical helper in various ways To remember President Mc Kinley is inevitably to recall that noted "business man in politics," Mark Hanna President Roosevelt made more than one choice, as occasion seemed to require, but his most esteemed unofficial adviser is said to to have been George W Perkins, then a member of the firm of J P Morgan & Co President Taft relied upon and employed the aid of his brother Charles P Taft a Cincinnati multi-millionaire The most talked of unofficial adviser of a President was Colonel House, a wealthy Texan of marked talents, who represented the Wilson administration in Europe as well as in America, being regarded in the former as a sort of potentate as well as a personage of great importance The very width of his field beset Colonel House's path with dangers, and that he finally hindered seemed to be indicated when on his return from Paris it was seen that he was no longer a frequent visitor at the White House

These recollections are rendered appropriate by the announcement that President Coolidge's closest friend, now at his side in Washington, is Frank W. Stearns, the "merchant prince" of Boston. It is said that Mr. Stearns "picked" Mr Coolidge "as a winner" when still a young lawyer, backed him for Governor, and has remained in his confidence and esteem throughout his service as Vice-President It is predicted that this relationship will continue even if Mr Stearns should not accept official appointment at the hands of the new President.

PRISON HONOR SYSTEM.

It seems that Governor Dohaney of Ohio took four penitentiary "trusties"—two first degree and two second degree murderers—into his domestic service, not merely because he is a "romanticist," a reader of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables," and an admirer of that classic's convict-hero, Jean Valjean, but because he is interested in and approves of the remarkable development of the prison honor system in Ohio That experiment has been in progress a little over ten years and the popular favor it enjoys is regarded as testimony to its success

Under the system penitentiary prisoners believed to be trustworthy are assigned to labor outside of prison walls A twenty-acre farm is worked entirely by convict labor and many convicts are employed in the manufacture of paving brick used on the state highways. The prisoners thus occupied are not locked up and one guard is held to be sufficient to keep watch over them. Individual convicts employed as servants leave the prison, do their day's work and return, unguarded. The penalty for breach of trust is confinement for two years, but its application is seldom called for It is stated that out of 1,200 "trusties" only about 20 broke faith last year, and most of these were recaptured. The account indicates that Governor Dohaney did nothing very startling when he took four "trusties" into his service as cook, housekeeper, gardener and chauffeur It is quite possible that under this system there is more encouragement toward reform, and perhaps more real reform, than under the ordinary prison system.

In his last public address in Washington before leaving for the west, the late President Harding reviewed the results of his economy campaign for the last fiscal year and urged the department and bureau chiefs to renewed efforts for the year beginning on July 1 "It is my earnest desire," said Mr. Harding, "that the expenditures for the coming year, excluding $500,000,000 for debt reduction, be kept within $3,000,000,000. Your assistance is needed to accomplish this, and I know that I can count on your loyal and unwavering support." There is every reason to believe that subordinate officials will render the same loyal aid to President Coolidge in making reductions in expenditure that are imperative if a balanced budget is to be had this year and the years following Budget Director Lord reports that there was a slight deficit in July, but he regards it as temporary and unimportant He warns, however that greater reductions must be brought about if the last request of the late Chief Executive is to be realized Mr Harding's sudden death should bring a firmer resolve that his final wish shall be fulfilled

1 Is cascara got from an imported plant?

Obtained from a Pacific coast tree or shrub belonging to the genus Rhamnus In tree form it grows as far north as British Columbia, and is often called wahoo bitter-bark wild coffee pigeon berry, etc Correctly named Rhamnus purshiana The medicinal element comes from the bark 'Cascara sagrada' only means "sacred bark," name applied by Spanish missionaries when learning its uses from South California Indians.

2 I read your note about mound building birds and hatching their eggs in dirt How do the young birds get out, and do their parents take care of them?

The nestlings of these Megapodes are said to remain in their mound for weeks, and to dig their way out one bird at a time, unaided by the parents. They are all feathered and have perfect wings and legs, and are able to take care of themselves, though in some species they do follow the mother until half grown The beginnings of their careers are not fully studied White ants have been found in some nests, and may furnish food for nestlings

3. How do you make a sugar mixture to attract night flying insects?

Molasses is the base made more smelly and attractive by adding stale beer, rum, asafoetida etc, and brown sugar Mix it so it will spread easily but won't run much Apply to tree trunks, board fences at dusk Moths that visit it cannot be scooped up successfully with a net, but can easily be jolted into a wide necked cyanide jar

WHY

Some Scholars Believe Earth Is Drying Up

Geographers assert that there is every evidence that the great desert belt that extends across Africa and Asia at or a little above the tropic of Cancer is growing larger and drier. The Syrian desert, which is now an utter waste, was crowded with cities and full of cultivated fields only two or three thousand years ago. Mesopotamia and Persia, ancient seats of civilization, could scarcely have risen so high if their climate then had been what it is now.

There are plenty of evidences that the Sahara and the Libyan desert have encroached on the fertile lands of north Africa and of the Sudan. The old "granary of Rome" in Tunis is now largely an arid waste. It is not surprising if the Nile draws less water than it used to from its tributaries in the Sudan, and loses more than it used to by evaporation. Most geographers agree that the deserts are growing at present. Some believe that it is only an inevitable step in the drying up of the earth, and expect the process to go on forever, though perhaps with occasional remissions.

Other scholars say that there is evidence of an extraordinary amount of fluctuation in the climate of the world; that there have been much drier periods than ours, as well as much rainier ones; and that the widening of the northern desert band is only a phase in a long-time movement of climate from wet to dry and back again. But as these secular movements are extremely slow, often taking many thousands of years to complete their swing, none of us now living will be here long enough to know which theory is the right one.

TO MAKE COMPLETE CHANGE

Why the Post Office Department Is Revising Entire Stamp Series Is Explained to Public.

A complete change in the design of our stamps has just been announced by the United States postal service, the ninth in the history of the country. Denominations from one cent to twelve cents follow the time-honored custom of commemorating great figures in American history. The story of the nation is told in the nine designs and denominations from 14 cents to $5.

The purpose of revising the entire stamp series was to produce designs which would have more destinctive color and clearer numerals Numerous complaints concerning the old series of stamps were made to the Post Office department and it is known that serious losses and mistakes resulted from the lack of definition in certain of the former designs

Traditional fate has waited upon the 13 cent stamp This denomination will not appear in the new series It was brought out during the war when the combined postage and registration fee was 13 cents Two new denominations take the place of this engraving in the stamp constellation, the 14-cent stamp and the 25-cent stamp, which are useful in connection with parcel post

Why Best Bananas Remain Home.

The ordinary fruit-stand banana is grown chiefly in Jamaica, Costa Rica and other parts of tropical America. Some attempt has been made to grow them in California, Louisiana and in other states with warm climates, but this is more or less of an experiment, because the plant cannot endure the slightest frost As a novelty, a few banana plants have borne fruit in colder climes, but under special protection.

It is interesting to note that the best and most tasty bananas are not known to most of us because they are too perishable to ship any distance. In the East Indies there are bananas that grow over a foot long and about two inches thick These are not exported but are used for home consumption.—The Pathfinder.

Why Editors Went Armed.

J. G. Muddiman has written the life of his ancestor, Henry Muddiman, who founded the London Gazette in 1665, says the Detroit News.

Muddiman's "News Letters," from 1667 to 1680, the manuscripts of which have been at Longleat, Wiltshire, since 1704, have been carefully examined Mr Muddiman compares the life of a journalist of those far-off days with that of the present.

"A remarkable contrast," he writes, "to a modern editor journeying to his daily work was presented by the bewigged Seventeenth century news writer, mounted on horseback and traveling to Whitehall or the 'Seven Stars' in the Strand, armed with a sword and a brace of pistols in his holster, 'because of the footpads at Knightsbridge.'"

Why Janitors Dislike Newly Married.

All the world is popularly supposed to love a lover and it is a common belief that all the world has a kindly spot in his or their hearts for the newlyweds. There is, however, one class that does not look with eyes of favor on the newly married—the apartment house janitor.

"Them new tenants in 4x," said one disgustedly the other night, "are newlyweds."

"Why the dislike?" asked a friend.

"All newlyweds are a noosance," replied the janitor, biting off a large chew of tobacco. "They don't know how to run things. The first thing you know every fuse in the place is blown out."

Height of Excellence.

He who excels in his art so as to carry it to the utmost height of perfection of which it is capable may be said in some measure to go beyond it; his transcendent production admits of no appellations.—La Bruyere.

WOODSTOCK.

Woodstock, Aug. 16.—The ladies of the Reformed Church will hold a supper and sale at the church on Tuesday afternoon and evening, August 21 The sale will open at 2 o clock and will consist of aprons, quilts and other useful articles Supper will be served at 6 o'clock, daylight saving time and during the evening Every lady invited

The Reformed Sunday school enjoyed a picnic at Glenford on Tuesday last and spent a pleasant day. The weather was ideal and the children enjoyed the ride on the two large hay wagons furnished for the occasion. During the afternoon addresses were given by the four ministers present. There were refreshments aplenty and at 4:30 the party returned home.

On Saturday from 3 to 5 o'clock there will be held on the porch of the Reformed Church a food sale. Each lady is kindly asked to furnish articles for its success.

The Salvation Army visits our village several times during the season and their music is greatly appreciated by the people.

EW GERMAN ABINET SUPREME

presents Final Attempt to Save Country From Its Own Factional Strife and French Domination, Says Younger Ebert.

Fritz Ebert, Jr., son of President Ebert, of Germany.

opyright, 1923, by International News Service.

Telegraph to The Freeman.

Berdin, Aug. 17.—Chancelor Gus- Stresemann's maiden speech in Reichstag clearly opened the way an understanding with France. France will give up her humiliat- and impossible demands then ciliation will be possible, and a settlement.

Chancellor Stresemann's speech s significant. It was made at a e when, beneath the surface, ave dangers were threatening Ger- any. Bloody communist disorders d broken out, which, for a time, emed about to make the Red aspi- ations successful. Also, a general rike had been proclaimed. But, ckily, the whole storm blew over st as the new cabinet made its ebut.

The outside world, especially rance, is grievously mistaken if it elieves the new cabinet will "crawl Paris offering unconditional sur- ender and begging for mercy."

The new governmennt stands as a ulwark against all attempts to an- ex or violate a single foot of Ger- an soil This is proved by two de- lopments.

First—Inclusion in the cabinet of Herr Soltmann, a Rhenish social de- mocrat, as minister of interior.

Second—Creation of a special post alled "Minister of Occupied Terri- tories," which will be administered y Dr. Fuchs, president of Rhine rovince, who was expelled by the rench

This is proof of the consolidation f the young German republic. Fur- her proof lies in the fact that the an who is now chancellor voted gainst the new constitution at Weimar in 1919 and was then a onvinced monarchist.

The Stresemann cabinet is back- d up by the strongest parliamentary uthority any nation has ever known It constitutes the final and upreme attempt to save Germany.

Tuberculosis Ancient Disease.

Tuberculosis has been called a dis- ase of modern civilization—but the mummy of a priest of Ammon buried 3,000 years ago shows as typical a ase of Pott's disease, or tubercular urvature of the spine, as could be found in any of the surgical wards of our hospitals today. The lungs were usually not replaced in the mum- mies, or else so jammed in with sand or sawdust or rags that the presence or absence of consumption could not e determined. Ruffer found one ung, however, which showed the typ- ical changes of lobar pneumonia, and nder the microscope the germs which aused the disease could be seen ly- ng in the air spaces of the lung. Though in shape they resembled the erms which today cause pneumonia, of course they could not be grown nor tudied sufficiently to make a positive diagnosis.—Exchange.

Rearing Fur-Bearing Animals.

Important progress has been made in investigations pertaining to the rearing of wild fur-bearing animals in captivity. Fur farms are reported from 25 states where foxes, skunks, racoons, minks, opossums, martens, muskrats, squirrels and beavers are reared. It is estimated that 50 ranch- ers are rearing silver foxes in the United Sates, that they have between 12,000 and 15,000 foxes in captivity, and that the value of the investment is about $8,000,000. The discovery of the fact that martens breed the last of July and in August has solved the problem which has heretofore pre- vented the successful rearing of these animals in captivity and has opened up an important field to the fur farmer.

Wonderful Linguist.

In the knowledge of languages, the famous Cardinal Mezzofanti, librarian of the Vatican, excelled. Mezzofanti could read, write and speak in over fifty languages, and was conversant with many of their dialects as well. It was his boast that he could talk in their own tongue with natives from al- most every corner of the globe. The poet Byron, for it was in his day the paragon lived, who met Mezzonfanti, spoke of him as "a monster of lan- guages, a walking polyglot, who ought to have existed at the Tower of Babel as universal interpreter," adding that he had tried him "in all the tongues of which I knew a single oath, and egad! he astonished me even in my English."

Historic Fact Hard to Explain.

British jet has been found in very early graves in Spain, linking up Spain with Britain in days long be- fore Romulus founded Rome. Even more interesting is the fact that beads of a peculiar blue color, which are now identified as undoubtedly of Egyptian origin and as dating back to some time between 1500 B. C. and 1250 B. C., have been found in very ancient British graves. So far as has been ascertained, there was no other source than British from which the ancient world could draw the tin it needed in such immense quantities for its bronze.

Had Been Misinformed.

Lord Littledough (who has got old Coldkash in a corner at the club)—Mr. Coldkash, your daughter is the idol of my life, the one hope and aim of my existence. Might I hope that some day I may be permitted to call her wife?

Mr. Coldkash (astonished)—But, my dear sir, I have no daughter.

Lord Littledough—Oh! pardon me; somebody told me that you had. Let's have a drink.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

BOY SCOUTS AND THE FLAG

Definite rules for the correct use of the American flag were considered at the National Flag conference held re- cently in Washington under the aus- pices of the American Legion. Dele- gates from sixty-seven national organ- izations, including the Boy Scouts of America, whose memberships total 5,- 000,000 Americans, were present. The Code committee, headed by Mrs. An- thony Wayne Cook of the Daughters of the American Revolution, brought in recommendations for the proper and dignified use of the flag as suggested by the flag codes of the Boy Scouts of America, the War department and the American Legion of Ohio.

The code has been described as "the basis of the first organized effort since the flag was created by the Revolution- ary fathers in 1776, to establish firm- ly the national emblem in the high place it should hold in the lives of the citizens of the Republic and to pre- vent endless forms of its misuse."

In his speech at the National Flag conference, President Harding called upon the American people to maintain in America, unimpaired, the things for which the flag stands. The President cited a recent instance of the respect shown the flag by a young naval officer sitting opposite his stand at one of the Shriners' parades during their nation- al convention in the capitol city. The young officer referred to was Ensign Warren D. Taylor of Submarine S-48, who rose and saluted the colors 118 times during the ceremony, "the only one performing that service that we noticed in the large company assem- bled in that reviewing stand," said President Harding.

"To me the President's speech was one of strongest inspiration," said E. S. Martin of the Boy Scouts of Amer- ica, who is also a member of the Code committee. "The fact that scouting in- culcates in the hearts of 450,000 boys the points which the President stressed, brings more clearly the realiz- ation of the glorious opportunities these lads have in espousing reverence for the flag by their example and strict adherence to the teachings of the movement."

TWO GOOD SCOUTS

A scout and a mascot from the Palisades interstate (N. Y.) boy scout camp, the largest camp in the world.

SCOUTS HOLD CONVENTION

With the tang of the fresh outdoors in it, the recent thirteenth annual meeting of the national council, Boy Scouts of America, held at the famous boy scout camps at Palisades Inter- state Park, N. Y., and attended by over 300 representative business, profession- al, church and school men, proved to be one of the most unique gatherings in the convention history of this country.

Palisades Park is a great wilderness of natural beauty, and a chain of 18 scout camps dot the shore of the placid Kanohwahke lake At the central camp the delegates were allotted their tents. One of the most picturesque meetings was that held around a mammoth campfire. At this particular session the camp questions were discussed. The representatives, between sessions, had opportunity to practice scout- craft and to hike over the new White- Bar trail, of sixty miles, which circles the scout camps. Other sessions were held at the Bear Mountain Inn. The delegates made the trip from New York to the camps and return on spe- cial boats via the Hudson. Boy scout guides pointed out the spots of inter- est along the historic river.

FIRST LADY PRAISES SCOUTS

A compliment by the first lady of the land to the alertness, thoughtfulness and loyalty of boy scouts, one that will go down in the annals of the Boy Scouts of America as a cherished trib- ute, was contained in the telegram re- cently sent by the presidential party to the scout executive at Tacoma, Wash.:

"Mrs. Harding states she felt safer when boy scouts aided in guarding the President. Please make offer to local committee of the services of a small guard of boy scouts."

Reverseness.

One of the hardest things to under- stand is how the fellow who used to ride to work on a street car—and got there on time—now seems to think he has to drive past all the street cars in town to get down to work at the same hour.

SECRET OF SLEEP NOT YET SOLVED

All Scientists Know Is That It Recharges Brain.

NOISE ARCH ENEMY OF SLEEP

An American doctor has been trying to find a substitute for sleep.

He has calculated that we spend about one third of our lives in more or less complete unconsciousness and that the average man of fifty has been asleep for seventeen years, says a specialist in an article in the Central China Post.

The idea is that this is a great waste of life, and that if one could take a pill or a dose of medicine instead of going to bed he would really have added many years to his allotted span.

But the research for such a substitute failed utterly and hopelessly. There is no substitute for sleep. Not one of the imitations is even "nearly as good."

I was discussing these experiments and their author with a French doctor at the top of a high mountain in Switzerland recently. We began to speak of sleep because some people who go for the first time to great heights complain that they are too wakeful. All around us were the great silent mountains, with their robes of pine trees and their crowns of snow.

The French doctor said:

"For my part, I always sleep best on the mountains. The silence seems to wrap itself around my brain."

He lives in Paris in a noisy part of the city.

Noise Arch Enemy of Sleep.

I reminded him that people often say that absence of a noise they are used to wakes them up. But he shook his head. That might happen, of course, but all the same, noise and sleep are not good companions.

"We hear noise even when we are asleep," he said, "and it hinders our refreshment. Noise is always a tax, great or small, on human strength."

The American doctor who wanted to abolish sleep found out exactly the same thing. He discovered that the same amount of sleep was more beneficial in silence than in a noisy place. By some means or other noise uses up the good which sleep does us.

What is that good? Hundreds of explanations of it have been given in the past. We have been told that a sleeping man is like an engine in the sheds, he is being cleaned and overhauled. But that explanation is not the whole truth. The new knowledge about sleep puts its value far higher than a kind of human polishing brush.

It was only when the brain itself came to be studied that the real meaning of sleep was found. The brain contains vast numbers of cells, each of which is related to some part of the body, just as an electric switch is related to some lamp or bell. The whole power and strength of the body depends on the brain cells.

What Is the Mystery Substance?

Up till a short time ago we knew very little about these strange structures. We were able to look at them with a microscope, and we could stain them with various dyes so that they showed up quite clearly against the rest of the brain matter.

And then one doctor, more observant than his fellows, noticed a strange thing. Sometimes the brain cells did not stain so well or so darkly as at other times. The little, vital cells were pale and indistinct instead of being clear and dark.

What had happened to rob them of their staining power? Evidently some substance which the cells that stained well contained was absent from the cells that stained badly and indistinctly.

A great many people began to try to find out what this mystery substance of the brain was. All kinds of strange experiments were carried out.

For example, if the brain of a hare which had been coursed was examined, the brain cells were empty of the mystery substance. The brain cells stained poorly and indistinctly.

The brains of men worn out in battle, or killed in condition of great strain, were also empty. And if a man had had no sleep for long periods, his supply of mystery substance was very, very low.

Gradually the knowledge came that during all efforts, both of mind and body, we use up this strange substance until at last our brain cells are empty of it. And then we can do no more. Unless we can get a new supply we perish.

Sleep the Restorer.

It is sleep which brings the new supply. It is sleep which fills the brain cells afresh with their vital mystery substance. It is sleep which saves us from utter exhaustion, and even from death. By no other means can we make our brains fit to work again.

And nature sleep is by far more useful in this respect than the sleep of drugs.

Sleep is thus the giver of life. Noise, which causes even resting brain cells to work, is the enemy of sleep.

So if you wish to give your children the greatest gift of all, see that the room they sleep in is the quietest in the house. See that you do not rouse them, not even to kiss them good-night.

And for yourself, try to shut out noise, and to get enough time for sleep. It will pay you over and over again. Our life of nightly entertainments means starred brains and so weak and unresponsive bodies. Exercise without sleep is expenditure without income.

If sleeplessness threatens, do not force the pace; that fails. Go to bed and read and then take a series of long, quiet breaths, and so far as possible relax all muscles.

In a few minutes, in most cases, sleep will come of itself. A hot-water bottle in cold weather is a great help.

8,000 CATS SING SWAN SONG

Overserenaded Public Reduces Brooklyn's Transient Feline Census.

Cat serenades are getting scarcer and scarcer in the Greenpoint and East New York district of Brooklyn. The crusade started a month ago by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, with co-operation of an overserenaded public, has attended to that.

Cages have been placed in McCarren park, Greenpoint, and Betsy Head park, East New York, where stray cats and dogs are turned in and then collected daily by Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animal wagons. Since June 1, 1,200 animals, mainly cats, have been rounded up by thirty men.

Dogs get a few hours' grace to see if anyone will claim them, but cats are hustled into a tank of carbon monoxide. Bodies are removed to Barren Island and turned into fertilizer.

TURKS RENAME GREEK SHRINE

St. Sophia in Constantinople to Be Called Mosque of Mahomet.

In order to remove all vestiges of Greek domination of Constantinople, the Turks intend to change the name of the historic Mosque of St. Sophia to Mehmedie mosque, that is, the Mosque of Mahomet.

Founded by the builder of Constantinople itself, Constantine the Great, who dedicated it to "Eternal Wisdom," St. Sophia mosque is one of the most famous religious buildings in the world. For more than a thousand years it was one of Christianity's most cherished shrines. It was built in the year 326. It was destroyed by fire in 404, restored, and again destroyed. Under Theodosius it was rebuilt into a magnificent church in 415, and 150 years later was further embellished by Justinian.

After the capture of Constantinople by the Turks in 1453 the church was converted into a mosque.

By the Turks St. Sophia mosque is held in a veneration second only to that which surrounds the famous Kaaba, or Sacred house, at Mecca. The Greeks regard it with equal sacredness.

PREMIER SPURNS NECKTIE

Polish Leader Goes Without Cravat to Accentuate Peasant Origin.

Premier Witos of Poland never wears a necktie. This, it is said, is in order to accentuate his peasant origin.

A Warsaw newspaper recently opened a subscription to buy a tie for Mr. Witos. In a few days the funds collected amounted to 1,700,000 marks. M. Witos would not accept the money, however, and at his request it was handed over to the Red Cross society as a donation to be known as "The Necktie of M. Witos."

Sought Love, Not Money.

Money without love was valueless to Joseph Becker, who told the court in Los Angeles, Cal., he burned $8,500 he had saved after he had shot and killed Miss Jane E. Kelso. He pleaded guilty to the murder and was sentenced to imprisonment for life.

MOTOR TOURISTS' CAMPS CONDEMNED

A breezy letter has come to Major W. Johnston McKay, city manager of Newburgh, from William J. Walker, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Greensburgh, Pa., described as "the clean town in the heart of bituminous region," who has learned through a clipping from the Highland Democrat of Peekskill that Newburgh's city manager has concluded not to go ahead with plans for a motor tourists' camp along the Recreation Park in South William street, near Lake. Talks with the city manager had with officials of cities which have constructed such camps for the accommodation of tourists who through necessity or choice prefer camping out to stopping in hotels convince him there are objectionable features to this form of civic hospitality. The camps may become a rendezvous for a class of persons (aside from bona fide tourists) not at all desirable. Mr. Walker writes:

"Congratulations on your wise move. I have always felt that, as far as the east was concerned, auto camps are damned nuisances. They encourage bootlegging, assignation and disease; they are not a fair shake to the hotel men, who pay taxes; they encourage petty stealing, spread children's diseases, like chickenpox and measles; they are an expensive proposition for a city to maintain properly with a guard and cleaners, electric lights, clean toilets and wood piles. I am glad to see you taking the stand you do. If you want to know how a good auto camp in the west is run, write to Charles Stafford, Chamber of Commerce, Casper, Wyo.

The reports will not down in Washington that Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty, of Ohio, is soon to leave the Coolidge Cabinet. Mr. Daugherty was a close personal friend and political mentor of Mr. Harding and is said to have entered the Cabinet only as a favor to Mr. Harding. His ill health will probably cause him to leave the office now that his chief is dead.

Slavery Statistics.

The enslavement of the African race for commercial purposes had its beginning in southern Europe about half a century before the discovery of America by Columbus. It was carried to Central and South America by the Spaniards, and it existed there a hundred years before being transplanted to the English colonies of North America. From a small beginning made in Virginia the institution grew and spread to other colonies as they were founded, and at the opening of the Revolution there were about 600,000 slaves in the colonies.

Leif Ericson, Norse Explorer.

Leif Ericson was a Norse adventurer. According to the Icelandic sagas, he sailed to Greenland with 35 companions about A. D. 1000, and from there in quest of a strange land to the west which had been sighted in 986 by the Norseman, Bjarni Herjulfson. He discovered the country which he named Vineland, from the grape vines he found growing there. The coast on which he landed has been identified variously—by some as that of Labrador or Newfoundland, and by others as that of New England.

Accurate Memory.

An Andalusian, according to a Spanish reading book for students, who was in a hurry went into a restaurant and ordered a meal. When the second course was being served he suddenly said to the waiter, "Where have I seen you before? Your face seems familiar to me." "I really can't say," the waiter replied; "I haven't the honor of a previous acquaintance." "But I have seen you somewhere! Ah! I have it! You are the man who brought me my soup!"

Money Not Everything.

When I hear a man saying that he is in business only for the money he can make and not for the favors he can render, I think of what some wise man said one time: "If a pig could pray he would devote his entire prayer to corn and swill, but men should pray for other sorts of things."—Tom Dreier in Forbes.

KLAN DEMANDS MAYOR RESIGN

Because of Failure to Prevent Riot In Which One Klansman and Alleged Assailant Were Shot.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Steubenville, Ohio, Aug. 17.—Mayor Frank Hawkins was expected to reply today to the demand of the Ku Klux Klan made late yesterday that he resign his office for failure to prevent the riot Wednesday night in which one Klansman was perhaps fatally shot, two other men wounded, one seriously, and approximately fifty others injured.

The Klan charges that the riot was a result of lax law enforcement conditions and placed the responsibility directly upon the mayor, against whom they had waged an ineffective campaign to prevent his renomination in the primary election Tuesday.

Six Klansmen arrested early in an automobile headed towards Steubenville, armed with shot-guns and revolvers, were free on bond today, bail having been furnished by Klansmen from outside points, following a meeting at Richmond, in which it was reported 1,000 members of the organization participated.

Sweeping investigations of the riot have been promised by both county and city officials, while the Columbiana County Klan announced it would provide a fund to prosecute every person involved in the riot.

Darwin L. Gibson, Pennsylvania railroad brakeman and Klan leader, is in a critical condition, and John De Santis, one of his alleged assailants, also may die, physicians say. A wound through the eye, at first though not serious has developed complications.

ARREST OF DE VALERA AROUSES RESENTMENT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Dublin, Aug. 17.—Documents captured by Free State troops indicate that the Republicans are preparing for a renewal of Irish Civil War using poison gas, trench mortars and high explosives, it was asserted by Free State officials today.

The arrest of Eamonn De Valera has aroused intense resentment. Although officials are secretive, it is reliable reported that the Republican chieftain has been transferred to Mount Joy prison in this city.

The Republicans claim to have nominated 85 candidates for 153 available Dail Eireann seats. The balloting will take place August 27.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

(Copyright by Western Newspaper Union.)

MRS. COW'S MEADOW

"Moo, moo," said Mrs. Cow.

"Moo, moo," said Mrs. Brown-and White Cow. "And pray, have you something to say to me? You look as though you had something on your cow mind."

"Ah yes," said Mrs. Cow, "I have something to say to you. In the first place I've heard people talk about their homes.

"Sometimes children will come to play with the farmer's children and they will talk of their homes and each will love their own home better than any other.

"They enjoy going visiting but home they say is the best of all.

"And the farmer loves his farm. And the farmer's wife loves yonder farm house

"All of this is quite true but what I had to say was that I am like people in that way.

"I love my meadow. I really feel as though this were my own meadow.

"To be sure, I share it with the other cows but it is my home.

"These children who speak of loving their homes share their homes with their mothers and fathers and sisters and brothers but the home is theirs, too.

"And so this meadow is my home.

"I love it just as they love the beauty of their houses. They always think their houses are beautiful and beautiful they are, I'm sure

"Their houses are filled with furniture they love and pictures they love just as this meadow is filled with grass which I love and down yonder is a brook which I love, and over there is a tree under which I like to lie.

"Oh, a cow knows what it is to love her own home and to be proud of it.

"In fact I am so proud of it and like it so much and enjoy the grass so thoroughly that at times I almost feel as though I had something to do with the making of the grass!

"Down Yonder Is a Brook."

"Moo, moo, I have written a song about my love of my home and if you would like to hear it I will sing it to you."

"I would love to hear it, moo, moo," said Mrs. Brown-and-White-Cow.

So Mrs. Cow made what we would consider strange little sounds which she called singing.

This was her song:

"I love my home, my meadow home.
In it I roam, in it I roam.
I eat of its grasses and its grasses are sweet,
And oh, its sky ceiling is always so neat.
There aren't any cobwebs in my ceiling, the sky,
In the first place a broom wouldn't reach that high
To brush it up and brush it down
And brush it over the country and town

"In the second place the sky is so very clean
That it would never allow a cobweb to be seen.
And so I say my ceiling is fine
For with cleanly beauty it doth shine."

"That word 'doth,'" said Mrs. Brown-and-White-Cow, sounds very poetical."

"I thought you would like it, my dear," said Mrs. Cow. "But my song is not ended. Shall I finish it?"

"Do," said Mrs. Brown-and-White-cow.

"I love in my beautiful mirror to look,
My mirror of course is yonder brook.
In it I see if I look my cow best
And when I see I do I then take a rest.

"Then I rest and I dream and I think of my home.
My beautiful home from which I'll ne'er roam
I am what you would call a contented cow
And the end of my song has been reached just now."

Mrs Brown-and-White-Cow swished her tail and said: "Moo, moo, I don't know much about poetry but as a cow critic I'd say you have done very well."

"Thank you," said Mrs. Cow. "I wanted a little praise even though you may know nothing of what you are saying'"

The roses of our days become
The fragrance of the past;

Their music cannot last.

Shall be, dear heart, a memory

FRUITY DESSERT DISHES

Fruit combinations are always delightful and it is a good way to use a small quantity of fruit. A peach or two, with a tablespoonful of strawberries, a little pineapple with a sirup made from sugar and fruit juice, using an orange if there is nothing that one likes better, the sirup poured over the diced fruit in sherbet cups garnished with a sprig of mint, make a most refreshing and attractive dessert or cocktail.

Watermelons and muskmelons served in cups, the fruit scooped out with a French potato cutter in balls, a sirup of Canton ginger or a lemon sirup with a bit of grated peel poured over the fruit and garnished with a sprig of mint is another delightful fruit dish. The ginger is especially good with the muskmelon and the lemon sirup with watermelon.

Delmonico Special.—Select six oranges of medium size, having a clear golden skin. Cut a slice from the end of each and carefully remove the pulp. Discard all tough membrane and mix the pulp with one-half cupful each of dates and walnut meats, coarsely chopped, and one-half cupful of cocoanut. Refill the shells, dividing the mixture. Beat an egg white until stiff, add one-fourth cupful of sugar or less if marshmallows are used, and place a spoonful with a marshmallow on top of each. Brown in the oven until a golden brown; serve at once.

Hawaiian Delight.—Measure and sift one and one-half cupfuls of pastry flour with three tablespoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one tablespoonful of sugar. Beat one egg until light, add three-fourths of a cupful of milk and one tablespoonful of melted butter. Beat well and bake in a greased pan, after dusting with cinnamon and sugar. Cut in squares and serve hot with grated pineapple poured over each portion.

COAL BREAKER AT EXPOSITION

Large Size Working Model of Loree Plant Will Show Course of Anthracite From Mine to Dealer.

Not the least of the sights at the Kingston Exposition, which opens August 27, will be a large size working model of a coal breaker going full blast, showing in detail the various operations that are performed on anthracite from the time it comes out of the mine until it is loaded into cars and taken to market. The model will be supplied by the North River Coal Company of this city and will be an exact replica of the Loree breaker at Plymouth, Pa., near Wilkes-Barre owned and operated by the Hudson Coal Company. It will be 30 feet long, 12 feet high and 10 feet wide and the machinery in it will be run by electric power.

The North River Coal Company is sending out invitations to its customers to attend the exposition and see the breaker model operated and accompanying each invitation is a pamphlet reading as follows:

The Loree Breaker has the distinction of holding three world's records—first, shortest time for erection; second, largest breaker; third, largest yearly tonnage.

The structure was built in 1919 after the former wooden breaker had been destroyed by fire in January of that year. One hundred and thirty days after the old breaker had been destroyed the first coal was prepared in the new plant. The usual time in building structures of this size, containing so much machinery, is from two to two and one-half years.

The building is practically fireproof, being constructed of steel, concrete and glass, with a minimum amount of lumber. Approximately 3,100 tons of steel and 3,000 tons of concrete were used in erection of this structure. The breaker proper contains 11,000 panes of glass which covers a major portion of the exterior of the building. The balance of the material, roofing and siding is made of asbestos protective metal.

Continuous forces of men worked night and day the entire one hundred and thirty days to complete this structure so that all men might return to work and production be resumed. Two years after its erection, in 1921, this breaker produced and shipped the largest tonnage ever originating from one plant 1,591,640 tons.

Six shafts and two slopes furnish the coal for this breaker. It is necessary to dump nearly 3,000 mine cars daily, containing approximately two and one-half tons each to reach the immense tonnage that was shipped for the year 1921. To ship this tonnage it is necessary to mine a total amount of material aggregating 2,075,000 tons per year, divided as follows:

1,100,000 tons prepared coal
491,000 tons smaller sizes
150,000 tons breaker slate
34,000 tons breaker slush
200,000 tons mine rock
100,000 tons fuel—burned in the Loree Colliery Boiler Plants.

Most of the transportation under ground is by electric locomotives and on the surface by steam locomotives, although Loree Colliery still has 300 mules in service under ground for the movement of cars to and from the miner's place. In mining this amount of coal it is necessary to pump four and one-half tons of water for each ton of coal produced and ten tons of air to each ton to coal produced. Each man working under ground must be furnished with 200 cubic feet of air per minute.

In order to wash, size and remove impurities, two tons of water are pumped into this breaker for each ton of coal handled. To drive the machinery in the breaker requires four two hundred horse-power motors and seven seventy-five horse-power motors. Machinery used at Loree in the manufacture of coal consists of five sets of crushing rolls, twenty sets of shaking screens, which total sixty complete decks of screening surface. For removing the slate this breaker has forty-four jigs.

Each mine car at Loree Colliery travels approximately 1.1 miles under ground before being delivered to the surface. On the surface the average mine car travels five-tenths of a mile. Record loading at this plant in one day of eight hours is 202 railroad cars. Under ground there are numerous electric and steam pumps and hoisting engines. The total power required to operate all machinery is produced by four boiler rooms, having a total of 7,700 horse-power. The breaker cost in the neighborhood of one and one-half million dollars.

As compared with the total operation of The Hudson Coal Company, Loree Colliery produces approximately 15 per cent. Total production from all collieries for 1921 was 9,122,405 tons. To ship this amount of coal it is necessary to hoist and transport in the mines an additional 1,110,000 tons of slate, 290,000 tons of slush, 1,824,000 tons of mine rock, and 820,000 tons of fuel consumed in their own boiler plants.

The reason for the large tonnage of refuse and mine rock is that the majority of the veins being mined today are from 15 to 50 per cent impurities. The miner gobs and throws aside the larger lumps of rock which are loaded and included in the 1,824,000 tons of mine rock. However, due to the fact that in shooting down the coal a great amount of impurities is found in sizes below grate coal, we find in the mine cars the immense breaker slate tonnage as stated, or an additional 1,100,000 tons of impurities which are removed in the manufacturing process carried on in the breaker.

A large number of veins being operated are three feet or under in height, the thicker veins having been nearly mined out in this section of the anthracite territory. Typical section of one of these thin veins is one foot of coal, six inches of slate, eight inches of coal, six inches of bone, four inches of coal, the total height for such a vein being three feet. In blasting, the coal does not necessarily separate from this slate and bone, but is united with it, making in many cases what is called capped coal. Some of this cappy coal material contains as high as 60 per cent carbon and it is very difficult for the miner to distinguish between the bad and good material and also between the good bone and coal.

Of the total number of employes, 20,000, approximately 5,000 are miners, 3,000 are laborers, 5,000 other inside men and 7,000 outside employes. Approximately 600 miles of railroad track are used under ground for the transportation of this tonnage, which is handled by 300 electric locomotives. All coal is carefully inspected at each breaker by two or three coal inspectors who condemn all cars containing excessive slate, bone or breakage. The total condemnation amounts to nearly 10 per cent; in other words, out of a total loading of 800 cars per day about 80 cars are re-dumped and again pass through the manufacturing plant.

In comparing anthracite and bituminous it must be taken into consideration that in the soft coal mines a yearly production of 2,000,000 tons can be attained with 1,500 employes, whereas for the same production of anthracite it is necessary to have 4,000 men. In other words, about one man in four employed by the anthracite mines is a miner or producer, while approximately three men out of four in the soft coal mines are miners or producers. Hard coal is a manufactured product passing through a very costly process which means crushing the larger lumps and recrushing until the sizes required by the domestic consumer namely, egg, stone and range coal, result.

In this crushing process and in the blasting under ground approximately 30 to 40 per cent of the coal is reduced to fuel sizes, which are really a by-product of domestic coal and which sell for one and one-half dollars to three and one-half dollars per ton, which figures do not equal even the labor cost per ton of coal without including the numerous other expenses. The veins of bituminous are practically pure coal, whereas most of the anthracite veins contain many partings of impurities.

A manufacturing plant necessary to properly manufacture anthracite costs in the neighborhood of $2,000,000, while the ordinary soft coal plant consists of a tipple frequently costing less than $50,000.

It might be interesting to note that the daily production of this company approximately from 30,000 to 35,000 tons is equivalent to 17,600,000 cubic feet or a daily excavation eight feet high, twenty feet wide and two miles long. This is given as a direct comparison to material removed in subway construction.

The fuel sizes of anthracite have replaced bituminous in many large plants and the advantages gained are numerous. First, less volatile matter in the anthracite means less flue losses; second, more uniform combustion beds; third, fires more easily cleaned; fourth, more efficient firing by both hand and automatic stokers; fifth, safety in storing anthracite; sixth, lower upkeep to boiler plant; and many other small advantages especially to the small consumer.

It must also be considered that practically no fluctuations in price of anthracite fuel sizes are noted, while the fluctuations in bituminous are numerous.

The first game will be called at 2:30 and the second game will start as soon as the first is completed. It is altogether likely that Bud Culloton will pitch both games tomorrow afternoon and Forsythe will then work in the Sunday game which will be with the same club.

CLERMONTS DEFEAT PORT EWEN JUNIOR RANGERS

Thursday night at Hasbrouck Park the Clermonts defeated the Junior Rangers of Port Ewen by the score of 8 to 7. Marks was on the mound for the Clermonts and pitched an excellent game, but due to the errors of the fielders he had poor support. Marks of the Clermonts had twelve strike-outs to his credit.

The feature of the game was a three base hit by L. Bruhn. Bruhn also getting three hits out of four times at bat. He also got some hot liners coming to third. Another hero of the game was J. Houghtaling. Just after Bruhn got to bat for a three base hit Houghtaling bunted down the third base line, Bruhn scoring with the winning run. Houghtaling also stepped to the bat getting three hits out of four times at bat. Shultz "Bambino" of the Clermonts had an off day getting one hit out of four times at bat.

The Clermonts would like to challenge any team between the ages of 12 and 15. They also challenge the following teams, Cub A. C., Eighmey Stars, Emerald, Senecas. They especially challenge "McVey Midgets." Communicate with R. Fitzgerald, call 1103-W or J. Houghtaling, 175 Hasbrouck avenue. In Tuesday night's Freeman it was stated that the Emeralds challenge teams first coming to Forsyth Park and getting return games. That is not so, because the Clermonts played there and did not get any return game.

FEW IMPORTANT CHANGES IN NEW MODEL NASHES.

Demonstrators Now on Way to Ulster Garage.

The Ulster Garage, Ltd., local distributors for the Nash fours and sixes for this section, have received notice of the new 1924 models. Demonstrators are now on the road and will be received here within a few days. Nash has made few radical changes this season and still maintains the same reliable and economical chassis as in the past. Several body changes have been made to give better appearance and more comfort to the driver. The instruments are grouped on the dash, giving easier access. Rear fenders have been extended down to give more grace and better protection to the body and numerous minor changes have been made in the coach work.

Closed cars in both the Nash four and six have some slight body changes but the mechanical appliances are the same for 1924 as in the past, the car being powered with the famous Nash valve-in-head engine which has been used for several seeasons past.

British Ambassador Right When He Says Immigrants Should be Selected Before They Sail.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 17.—The remedy for congested conditions at Ellis Island, with all attendant evils and hardships, lies at the source of immigration across the Atlantic and not in this country, Secretary of Labor Davis declared today, replying to the report of Sir Auckland Geddes, British ambassador, made public in London.

"Ambassador Geddes strikes at the heart of the matter when he recommends that we arrange if possible for all immigrants to be finally approved or disapproved in their home lands," Secretary Davis said.

"I hope his government may follow his recommendations and undertake the control of immigration where control is easy and effective, at the source."

Causes of Tidal Movements.

At different times in the history of the world a great many theories have been entertained as to the cause of the tidal movements. Aristotle and Heraclitus thought that the tides were caused by the sun, which, whirling the winds about, caused the water to rise and fall. Later the explanation was advanced that the motion was the natural one of respiration—the breathing of the sea. The Arabs of medieval times thought that possibly the moon heated the water and thus caused it to swell and to recede again as it cooled.

Origin of Old Saying.

The saying, "Good Wine Needs No Bush," owes its origin to the ancient custom of hanging out an ivy bush at the doors of taverns—probably in honor of Bacchus, to whom the ivy was sacred—to inform travelers that "good cheer" might be found within. Many references to this custom are found in the old poets and dramatists. In Lily's "Euphues" are these lines: "Things of greatest profit are set forth with least price. Where wine is neat, there needeth no ivie-bush."

IF MRS. COOLIDGE SETS THE STYLES

There'll Be Broad-toed Broad-heeled Shoes—One Trunk Holds Her Wardrobe and She and President Buy at Home.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 17.—There's a little French woman—Mrs. Girard—in Northampton, who makes clothes for the first lady of the land. There's a humble tailor shop not far from Mrs. Girard's where the president buys his suits.

Down the street are the Mahony Sisters. And there the first lady selects her hats.

"Trade at home" chorus the Coolidges. "If you don't buy in your town, and I don't buy in my town, what's going to become of our town?"

So Mrs. Coolidge is wearing a Girard gown and Mahoney hat all over Washington. Now most women would believe that innumerable dresses and hats were requisites of a president's wife. But not Mrs. Coolidge. Not that the style is not good enough for her.

So far as can be ascertained, she has but one trunk. Other women in her position would have a dozen. She has written Mrs. Girard ordering a dress, and to the Mohoney Sisters, requesting a hat to match.

Taking stock of her wardrobe, the first lady declared she had quite enough of summer things.

"I'll wait," she said, "until fall. Then I'll go shopping in the big metropolis."

Word spread abroad, and Mrs. Coolidge is swamped with letters and advertisements. She has her list compiled and is ready to invade New York with her share of the presidential salary. Then she will go to Boston, and patronize, most likely, the store operated by Frank W. Stearns, the man who "discovered" her husband.

Until such time as the mourning period ends, the first lady will dress very simply, and mostly in black. But when the social season gets under way in December, she will blossom forth.

There will be all kinds of frocks and wraps and suits in Mrs. Coolidge's White House wardrobe, but only one kind of shoes. Sensible, broad heeled and broad toed. For the first lady likes to walk and takes most of her exercise that way.

Will her taste in shoes be reflected in the style shows? Will there be such things as "Calvin heels" and "Coolidge lasts?" It is altogether probable. All the girls will go back to Oxfords and high heels and pointed toes will go in the discard. For, if Mrs. Coolidge wears a thing, it's bound to become latest style.

COOLIDGE TALKS COAL WITH CABINET OFFICERS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 17.—Cognizant of the critical turn of the anthracite negotiations in New York between the coal commission and operators and miners, President Coolidge today summoned three cabinet officers, Secretaries Hoover, Work and Daugherty—to the White House to discuss what possible additional moves the federal government may take to avert a strike.

The nature of the plans discussed was not disclosed but it was intimated the administration will do nothing until the report of the commission has been submitted to the president.

COAL OPERATORS ISSUE STATEMENT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Aug. 17.—Coal operators of the anthracite field today went before the public with a statement of their position in the controversy with the miners that threatens a coal strike September 1.

"The operators are ready to renew negotiations to reach an agreement mutually acceptable," they declared in a letter to the United States Coal Commission with the request that it be made public.

If an agreement is not reached by September 1, the operators propose that the matters still in dispute be submitted to arbitration, the arbitrators to be appointed by President Coolidge if the two sides are unable to agree on their selection.

"The miners have refused to resume negotiations unless certain of their most substantial demands are granted in advance," the statement declares, adding the operators will submit all matters to arbitration, including the check-off.

The letter follows:

"In response to your request that we present a written statement covering our position, we submit the following:

"The operators have agreed to certain demands of the miners, as follows:

"1. To eliminate the 12 hour day from the industry.

"2. To provide for a speedier adjustment of grievances before the board of conciliation and the umpires.

"3. To complete the work of compiling rate sheets at each colliery in accordance with the resolution of the miners at joint conference.

SOME OF LIFE'S COMEDIES

Picked at Random From Recorded Doings of the Very Newly Married.

Here's to the very newly married.

It was winter and the young husband complained bitterly of a "beastly" pain in his back; lumbago, pleurisy; "Heaven knows what!" he gloomed to his terrified spouse. And talked largely of more life insurance. Terrified into action she recalled her mother's remedy for such mysterious aches and pains, says a New York Sun and Globe writer.

A boiling hot bath and—wasn't it borax? On this fateful morning she therefore drew the bath, arranged the towels and seeking in the kitchenette—equipped for her while on her recent wedding trip by her feminine relatives—she discovered the borax in a large bag. Uncertain of the quantity, she flung the contents into the tub and ordered her husband to soak. He did, from crown to toe.

After which there were scenes. The borax was starch.

And then there was the bride who on a cruise with her groom in a forty-four sailing sloop, in the midst of a really terrific storm when the crewless captain and owner was struggling with sheets and centerboard, called loudly from the cabin, "We shall capsize!" He groaned but fled to her rescue, and found her sitting peacefully on a rocking camp stool. She smiled sweetly when he entered.

"Would you mind," she asked tenderly, "buttoning my shoes."

And about the bride whose husband demanded sausage meat—the kind one fries, you know, the back home sort, served in little sizzling cakes? How about her when she went to her butcher and, learning that no sausage meat was to be had at the moment, bought with gravity and hard earned lucre a dozen or so small fat sausages and ordered the patient butcher to strip off the skins and dig forth the succulent innards. How about her? How about them all, bless them?

Exporting Worm Holes.

That it pays to investigate needs of foreign markets is shown by the following incident which occurred in a foreign country a short time ago, recently reported to the lumber division of the Department of Commerce.

An American exporter sent an unusually poor consignment of oak, which was found to be wormy, to his overseas connection, but no market could be found for this parcel. This consignment would have caused a great loss to the exporter were it not for the fact that the consignee happened to visit an antique furniture factory. The manufacturer was at that time busily engaged in making antique grandfather's clocks and found the oak in question to answer his purpose very nicely because it eliminated the work of boring worm holes by hand. The parcel was disposed of at a premium and a profitable connection was established.

Force, Not Elegance.

During the war an enlisted man who had done well in our service was commissioned as a second lieutenant. He knew his drill and his duties perfectly, but owing to his lack of education the words that he used in his reports were sometimes puzzling.

During the fighting around Chateau-Thierry he found that he and his platoon were far in advance of the rest of the line and in a very tight place; there was little hope of their getting out unless help came quickly. He had already lost a good many men. Calling his runner to his side, he gave him this message to deliver to the colonel:

"Beat it to the old man, kid, as fast as your legs'll carry you and tell him, with my respects, to hustle up reinforcements, as me and the whole platoon are all decomposed!"

In spite of the choice of words the reinforcements arrived in time.—Youth's Companion.

Cherry Leaf Spot Can Be Controlled by Spraying

Cherry leaf spot, which defoliates the sweet and sour cherry trees every midsummer promises to be just as serious this summer as in past seasons unless another spray of either lime-sulphur, bordeaux mixture, or sulphur dust is applied at once. By attacking the leaves and causing them to drop this disease weakens the trees, and by reducing the leaf-area immediately around the fruit spur, it holds back fruit-bud formation.

The disease is caused by a fungus which lives over from year to year. The fruiting bodies form on dead leaves during the late spring and summer, to give off spores which cause the new infection. It appears as small purplish spots on the leaves which turn brown, and fall out leaving a "shothole" effect. When formed on the petiole it causes the leaf to drop.

The curculio and brown rot sprays on the fruit, control the first spores, but those developing now will cause defoliation unless the leaves are immediately coated with spray. In case of protracted wet weather it may even be necessary to apply another spray in the latter part of August.

A spray for sour cherries, recommended by the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment station, is concentrated lime-sulphur, diluted one part to forty of water, 4-4-50 bordeaux; 90-10 or 80-20 dust also has been found fairly effective. The addition of a quarter pound of iron sulphate per 50 gallons of the lime-sulphur solution has been found to reduce the burning and increase the sticking qualities. On sweet cherries, bordeaux should not be used, and the lime-sulphur dilution should be reduced to one part to 50 or 60 of water.

Commence Pruning Young Fruit Tree Soon as Set

Beyond all question the first half-dozen years of the life of a young fruit tree will have more to do with the proper shape of the tree, the proper placing of branches, than any subsequent stretch of many more years. For this reason the pruning should be commenced the very first year the trees are set out.

If one-year-old whips are planted, cut back at pretty close to the point where you expect to have the tree head. Two-year-old trees will have lacterals but after the tree is set head back the leader, remove branches in improper locations, and head back others of excessive length.

You are going to do two things with these young trees. The first is to balance the top and root, that is, take some of the top off to compensate the tree for its loss of roots in digging to transplant. This is to insure its growth. The second thing you are accomplishing with your young trees is to "bend the twig" right, in order that your trees may be rightly inclined.

Pruning Peaches After Size of Crop Is Noted

Many peach growers wait until they know whether they will have a crop before completing the pruning of their peach trees. It is generally necessary to take out from one-third to one-half of the new wood produced on the vigorous trees. However, where there is a very heavy crop considerable pruning can be done to help thin the fruit. Where the crop is rather light and scattered, however, it is customary not to prune quite so heavily in order to save the crop. Where the trees have lost their crop, it is the best way to put the trees in excellent condition by giving them a heavy pruning.

St. Regis Red Raspberry Is Best Early Variety

The St. Regis red raspberry, originally introduced for its fall-bearing character, has been found to have a real high value as an early spring variety. In fact it may be said to stand out as the best early red variety for home use and market. It has good size, color and quality and has become very popular in some sections. It is adaptable and can be relied on to succeed wherever other varieties do well. It is not a very strong grower and for that reason should have good soil and culture. It is disposed to send up a great surplus of suckers that must be rigorously cut off and thinned out in the spring in time for the remaining canes to get the full benefit of unchecked growth during the summer. Unless this be done there will be a multitude of small weak canes of low productive power.

Spray From Ground.

To spray with a long hose from the ground gets aphid better than shooting from the top of the spray tank, New York scientists say.

Painting Wounds.

It is a mistake to paint wounds until after the sap has gone out of the wounds. They can then be covered over with shellac or paint.

Profit Instead of Problem.

By proper management the orchard may be a profit instead of a problem.

Luxurious "Tubbing."

Ancient bathtubs of kings had one pair of steps for the rulers to mount the platform and enter the tub and several smaller flights of stairs at each end for attendants to carry up vases of scented water which they would throw on their master.

O CHANGE HERE ON REPARATIONS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Aug. 17.—There is no asis for the belief in some European pitals that President Coolidge has ffected a change in the policy of the nited States toward the reparations roblem it was declared officially at e state department today.

The White House announcement Tuesday that this government ould be responsive to European alls for assistance has been misinterpreted in some quarters, according reports reaching here, and has led the feeling that the administration ans to participate in the solution of he reparations problem regardless of he effect of such participation upon he United States.

State department officials declared oday, however, that neither Presient Coolidge nor Secretary Hughes ad placed themselves in a position hich required the acceptance of any lan to straighten out Europe's ecoomic affairs but that any proposal manating from a responsible source ould be considered

The administration still looks with avor upon the plan of Secretary ughes for an international commision of economic experts to determine ermany's ability to make reparaions payments, but has not promised o be represented on such a commision if one should be established by he allied governments.

Because of doubts that have arisen n Europe concerning the policy of he United States, the American ambassadors overseas are understood to ave been advised that there has een no change in the attitude of this overnment toward the reparations ituation

OLIVET OPENS NEWEST PLACE

The new Olivet confectionery and ce cream saloon at 632 Broadway, corner of O'Neil street, will be open for inspection this evening. This store is the very latest in stores of its kind the aim of Mr. Olivet being to make it supreme as to sanitation and quality of wares. The building, which had been an old style brick structure, has been completely remodeled the roof raised, the front and side given a number of coats of paint, a modern and attractive store front of Nu-stone erected on Broadway and the newest thing in copper and plate glass fronts installed. The store fixtures, confectionery counters of natural woods and the long marble soda fountain counter are very artistic and beautiful, making the Olivet store truly an ornament to the city.

Not only has Mr. Olivet spent several thousands of dollars in installing the store and on improvements to the building, but he has also built at the rear a long attractive brick building facing O'Neil street which is occupied by two grocery stores of the Interblock people and also a store occupied by a shoemaker, the addition being a big improvement to the street.

Mr Olivet was for some time successfully engaged on a large scale in the making and selling of ice cream at wholesale in this city, which business he disposed of about a year ago

Try This Formula for Feet.

Not alone upon the choice of shoes does the comfort of the feet depend. Even perfectly healthy, normal feet need particular daily care. With such care even tender feet become normal. After shopping or walking and at the close of the day, it is an excellent thing to bathe the feet in cold water, Julia W. Wolfe writes in the Health Builder. If you cannot endure the shock of cold water at first, begin with tepid water and add the cold water gradually. When it is convenient, the faucet—cold water—should be allowed to play upon the feet. The reaction of the cold water aids circulation and gives tone to the arteries. Use no soap in the tonic foot bath; free alkali, which might be present in the soap, tends to blister the feet. With this treatment continued daily, one's feet soon grow healthy and foot troubles are a thing of the past.

Bridal Superstitions.

There is a firm belief in some parts of England that those who secure possession of a bride's pins when she has returned from church, will be married during that year themselves. In the struggle to secure these favors there was much mirth and merriment created, and sometimes the object of all these efforts to secure the coveted pin found herself at bay. But there were also other ideas about the bridal pins, for some held that when she removed her robe or veil every pin that held them in place should be thrown away. If a single one remained, according to this tradition, evil would befall the bride. And it was also held that if the bridesmaids also kept the pins that fastened their own bridal apparel that their own luck would be affected.

Weather and Weddings.

Weather plays a great part in decisions as to wedding days, or their good fortune. It was formerly, as much as today, a piece of luck if the sun shone on the bride on her wedding day, and there is an old saying, "Blest is the bride that the sun shines on!" No doubt this had a special meaning in olden times, for it was customary for a wedding to be performed in the church-porch, and the formula "going to church" was preceded by "visiting the church-porch." It was not till after the Reformation that wedding ceremonies were performed in the body of the church. Another quaint idea connected with weddings of the past was the general view that to insure her future happiness a bride should shed tears on her wedding day.

BETTER ROADS

Chief Causes of Injury to Improved Highways

The chief causes of injury to improved highways, used by motortrucks, are listed by observers as follows:

1. Overloading of trucks.

2. Poor road material and construction.

3. Speeding of trucks.

4. "Unsprung weight," or weight of a loaded truck not sustained by springs.

"It is an evidence of wisdom as well as justice toward all road users on the part of highway officials to keep load weights within reasonable bounds," says an expert.

It isn't economy to load a truck beyond its capacity, he adds. "A truck will stand some overload; the manufacturer refers to this as the factor of safety. It might better be called a factor of ignorance, for the additional strength of the truck is expected by the owner to support the additional load put on it due to ignorance."

Don't blame the big truck, is the warning of an automotive engineer. "The truth about the motortruck and the road," he explains, "is that in practically all cases ascribed to the large truck the real cause of road failure has been some defect in design and construction of the road, such as insufficient foundations, weakening by frost, lack of proper drainage or the use of inferior materials.

"Unsprung weight," or the weight not sustained by springs, helps break up the roads. "It has been found," he says, "that a large-capacity truck so designed as to have a light unsprung weight has a much lighter impact than a smaller truck having a heavier unsprung weight."

"The road must be adapted to the load," concludes this engineer. "To attempt to solve the problem by prohibiting the use of the larger truck is equivalent to the action of a railway that, finding its roadbed and rails inadequate for its increased traffic, should discontinue the use of powerful locomotives. This would deprive the public of the service to which it is entitled."

Patrols Make Maryland Roads Quite Efficient

Maryland, which has one of the best road systems in the United States, has consistently followed the plan of taking poor roads and building them up by gradual steps and by careful and adequate maintenance rather than by building the most expensive type and letting it deteriorate for lack of proper care.

The first improved roads in Maryland were comparatively inexpensive, costing only what the taxpayers were willing to pay, the first few years the cost being less than $10,000 per mile. In some places the work entailed considerable grading and drainage, but in others it amounted simply to resurfacing the old turnpikes, which had already been graded and drained.

Generally the roads built at that time were macadam, 12 feet wide and six inches thick. Soon the width was increased to 14 and later some were made still wider, some very successfully, by adding concrete shoulders on each side of the macadam.

The macadam roads in Maryland have given good satisfaction, but continuous care has largely been responsible for their success The roads are constantly patrolled and no hole of any size is allowed to go unrepaired. Material for patching is kept at convenient points for the use of the patrolmen. From a relatively small investment in admittedly low-type road it builds up a better one from year to year, always conserving the bulk of the previous investment.

Highways Are Necessary for National Transport

Highway transport is not a single responsibility, says the Scientific American. Its efficiency depends not solely upon the highway engineer nor the automotive engineer, but upon their hearty co-operation. It is just as harmful to limit the axle weight of trucks by laws based upon the present condition of roads, except of course as a temporary measure, as to expect that highway departments will respond to every caprice of automobile design. Highways must, however, be considered as only a means to an end and that end, national transport. It is just as necessary to pass regulations governing the nature and the strength of roads as to pass regulations controlling the weight and speed of the vehicles using them. The future highway must be constructed with regard to its use by self-propelled vehicles and the automotive engineer, because of the heterogeneous types of road surfacing, must design and construct reasonably light vehicles capable of carrying its load at minimum cost.

Provide Shade and Pure Water for All Animals

Provide plenty of shade and cool, pure water for the cows and young animals. Spray cows at milking time to keep off flies. Look out for sour milk and cream. Bacteria and warmth cause milk to sour. The modern way to spoil bacteria is dilute. Keep it out of the milk, thoroughly wash and scald all milk utensils. Keep the milk or cream cool, 50 degrees or lower if possible, and it will stay sweet for several days.

More Mountains May Rise.

The great changes that the earth undergoes may be judged from the fact that four times since geological history began new generations of mountains have arisen in Europe, and there is no reason to suppose that there will not be another.

DAUGHERTY TO ENTER "GAS WAR"

Department of Justice Gathering Evidence for Suit in Equity Against Alleged Price-Fixing Combinations.

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Washington, Aug. 17.—A suit in equity under the general criminal statutes to break up alleged combinations to control gasoline prices was being planned today by the department of justice.

Attorney General Daugherty has not decided when federal action will be instituted, and the time and place of initiating a suit will depend upon a summary of the reports now being filed with the bureau of investigation with respect to the "gasoline price war" in the middle-west.

Public pressure for governmental action has spurred the department of justice in an effort to speed up the comparatively slow process of the federal trade commission, which is said to be powerless to apply corrective measures in the present situation United States attorneys have been instructed to gather evidence of conspiracies to fix or control prices and are wiring their findings to the attorney general

Thus far, however, there has not been sufficient proof that this combination among the oil companies has gone far enough to establish clearly that illegal "agreements" are in existence

The relation of the so-called independent companies to the larger concerns also is being made the subject of investigation The records of these and others among the dominant elements in the alleged combines of oil producers are being carefully examined by legal experts of the department of justice, and will be submitted later to the attorney general

C. Bascom Slemp

Mr Slemp, a resident of Big Stone Gap, Va., is 53 years old and a wealthy bachelor For years he was Virginia's only Republican Congressman

Not Really Work of Homer.

The Homeric hymns are poems supposed by the ancients to have been written by Homer, but considered by modern critics to have been the work of others. Of those now extant, the five best known are hymns to the Delian Apollo, to the Pythian Apollo, to Aphrodite, to Hermes, and to Demeter. The Homeric hymns are vastly inferior to the Iliad and Odyssey, and probably contain fragments by writers of every century, from the time of Homer to that of the Persian war.

Rather Neatly Put.

"You seem to have something on your mind. Speak out, Mr Bashful," said she. Then he said: "What I wanted to say is that I am perfectly sure there is not another man in the world who yearns for a mother-in-law as much as I do, since I have become acquainted with you"

Tree Named for Franklin.

The "Franklin" tree, once so popular on account of its decorative qualities, is now practically extinct, for there are but a half dozen specimens known to arborculturists. It was discovered in 1765 by John Bartram on the Altamaha river, in Georgia, and named for Benjamin Franklin, to whom Bartram, the great naturalist, was indebted for specimens. It is thought to have been exterminated by persons gathering seeds and seedlings. Specimens of the Franklin tree are standing at present at Chevy Chase, Georgetown, Va.; Fairmount park, Philadelphia; Hyattsville and Germantown, Philadelphia.

An Elastic Worker.
The only thing that works 24 hours on a stretch in these soft times is a rubber band.—Binghamton Sun.

Family Unnecessarily Alarmed.
A staid business man suddenly began reading Mother Goose.
In his library at night he would go over these old rhymes, seeming to weigh one as against another, then shaking his head and turning to the other parts of the book. Naturally his family became alarmed and sent for the family doctor. The medical man had to go about broaching the subject with fine diplomacy, of course, but it had to be done and he did it. He explained to the business man that the latter's wife was becoming uneasy.
"Great snakes!" exclaimed the merchant when he had grasped the idea. "What does a woman know about business? I'm just trying to find a good name for a new style in children's rompers."

Reward Finest Building.
Old London is setting an example to the world in striving for beauty. The Royal Institute of British Architects has granted a bronze medal every year for the finest street frontage built within four miles of Charing Cross. It was won this year by W. Curtis Green, for Wolsely house, Piccadilly. More than a score of fine buildings were considered by the jury: Earl Crawford, Sir Aston Webb, Paul Waterhouse, Sir Reginald Blomfield and F. Guy Dawber. The quality looked for was not commercial but aesthetic and architectural. Liverpool and Manchester already have schemes for rewarding their beautifiers.—London Mail.

Blueberries an Inch Thick.
A blueberry an inch in diameter is not a dream, but a possibility. At the United States Department of Agriculture testing plantation at Whitesbog, four miles east from Brown Mills, N. J., about 25,000 blueberry hybrids have now been fruited. Many of them, according to the Scientific American, have produced berries three-fourths of an inch in diameter, several four-fifths of an inch and one of them this year reached almost seven-eights of an inch.

World's Largest Camera.
The largest camera in the world is in the Department of the Interior in Washington. It weighs 7,000 pounds, occupies two rooms, and takes a picture one yard square. The lens, bellows and copy holder are in one room, and the plate holder and dark room in the other.

Burns Memorized Before Writing.

ONS ENTHUSIASTIC OVER BOY SCOUT CAMP

Ellenville, August 15, 1923.

r Henry Nesslage, Scout Executive, 448 Broadway, Kingston, N. Y.

r Dear Mr. Nesslage:

I have had in mind to write you nce my visit to Camp Tiskilwa, exssing my appreciation for your efris in behalf of the Ulster County outs in the matter of a summer mp.

Three boys of my family spent the st period in camp and returned me with such enthusiastic reports t I was led to come up in order to ok over the location and camp.

It seems to me that the site seted by you was ideal, and that we e greatly indebted to Mr. Schwarzalder for his kindness in giving us e use of it. So many things enter to the choice of a proper camp site at it is not easy to locate the right ot and find it ready made for use. think you were fortunate to locate s particular place.

So far as I can see your camping ason was successful in every way cept that not enough boys availed themselves of the privilege which the amp offered. Inasmuch as it was a w proposition it was not to be exected that all parents would grasp e possibilities of the camp idea, and erhaps it is true that Ulster county s never very eager for a new idea, ut this indifference or lack of nowledge can be overcome in time, nd I look forward next year to a ost successful camping season with lenty of boys in attendance.

I want you to know that your most fficient efforts are appreciated and I elieve that the council will be glad o back up your camp with whole eart next year.

With best wishes, I am,

Yours very truly,

H. WESTLAKE COONS.

RWIN ATTORNEY IN TROY BREWERY SEIZURE.

Roscoe Irwin has been retained as ttorney by several of the men associated with the Hudson Cereal Beverage Company, whose brewery was eized Tuesday by prohibition agents at Troy, and padlocked. The plant, which is valued at between $100,000 and $125,000, includes five buildings, all of which, including machinery, were confiscated by the government. An investigation will be had to determine what to do with the plant.

LYONSVILLE.

Lyonsville, Aug. 16.—Next Sunday, August 19th, will be the last Sunday on which the seminary student, Albert Deyo, will preach in Lyonsville and Krumville.

On August, 26th, the Rev. James Cantine of Stone Ridge, who is a missionary to Arabia now on furlough, will conduct the services.

The party held at the Lyonsville Church on August 9, was a great success. Judging from the number of cars parked around the church the crowd was great. A hundred and three dollars was realized as profit and everyone seemed satisfied with the generous supply of good things furnished.

Leonard to be at Bazar.

Benny Leonard, who is training at Tannersville for his coming fight with Dundee, to take place in September, will appear at a bazar being conducted Monday night at Haines Falls for the benefit of the Catholic Church of that place.

MUSIC FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC AUGUST 29

Editor, The Freeman:

We wish to correct the statement made in last week's paper, that the Salvation Army Band, would furnish music for the Sunday School picnic to be held on August 29th. It has been found to be impossible for them to be there on that date. However, some other good music will be provided. The members of the Ladies' Aid Society, ably assisted by the pastor, are sparing no efforts to make this occasion agreeable and entertaining. Comfortable seats will be provided to add to the attractions.

FOR MOTHER AND BABY AT THE FAIR

Specially Trained Nurses at State Department of Health Booth Will Have Much to Interest Them.

Every woman in this county will find much to interest her at the State Department of Health booth at the county fair where specially trained nurses will demonstrate the latest ideas in outfits for the new baby and will outline how Mothers' Health Clubs may be organized in this vicinity. Every mother visiting the booth will receive a copy of the new diet lists showing the best diets for children one to two, two to four and four to six years of age.

Nurses who have had long training and experience in the care of mothers and babies will be present to show how baby clothes can be made so as to be most comfortable for the baby and easiest for the mother to make and handle. They will also be prepared to help organize a Mothers' Health Club for this district. Wherever such a club is organized the Division of Maternity, Infancy and Child Hygiene will assist in securing a nurse trained in getting such a club started.

A cordial invitation is extended to every woman in the county to visit the demonstration and meet the nurse and the division baby. An additional exhibit of articles for the mother and baby will be of general interest.

The demonstration at the Ulster County Fair will be held in Ellenville August 21st to 24th inclusive and will be in charge of Miss Margaret O'Connor who has had wide experience in public health work and has conducted the nursing demonstration in Glen Cove, Geneva and St. Lawrence county. The state supervising nurse, Mrs. Anne Stanton and the district state health officer, Dr. F. W. Laidlaw, are cooperating.

Through the courtesy and cooperation of Miss Anna C. Brenner, field worker of the Council of Jewish Women, arrangements have been made for space for this demonstration.

Stealing Ball No Crime

A boy who gets a baseball in the bleachers to take home as a souvenir is acting on the natural impulses of all boys and is not guilty of larceny, according to a decision handed down by Judge Brown in a Philadelphia municipal court.

Robert Cotter, eleven, was sitting in the bleachers at the Philadelphia National league park when a foul fly came in his direction and he put the ball in his pocket.

The boy was turned over to a police sergeant and taken to the house of detention, where he spent the night.

KNEE-HIGH BALL IS QUITE HARD TO HIT

Some Pitching Is Easier Than Others to Batters.

Big league batters have often been asked what is the hardest ball to hit. Of course, sticksmiths can bat some particular sort of pitching more easily than others, but there is a general sort of rule covering the easiest and hardest deliveries to face successfully, writes Jack Kofoed in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The easiest sort is the one pitched in the "groove," about half-way between the waist and the shoulder, three or four inches toward the hands from the outer end of the bat when fully extended.

A ball hard to hit must be away from the plane of the natural swing of the bat; that is, above or below the point midway between the waist and shoulder. At first glance it would appear as if there was no choice as to whether the ball is above or below the natural swing of the bat, but according to the rules of the game the vertical limits of a strike are the knee and shoulders. About ten inches is the limit above the natural swing of the bat, while about thirty inches is the limit below.

Also, at first blush, it would seem to make little difference whether the ball was pitched at the outer end of the bat or the handle, in the horizontal plane. However, a ball pitched at the extreme outer end is usually beyond the outside edge of the plate, depending whether the batter is standing away or "crowding." As most batters step into the plate, bringing the bat beyond its outside edge, it is better policy to pitch at the "weak end"—the handle. Not even Babe Ruth can hit one very far with his knuckles.

Hence, the hardest ball to hit, theoretically and practically, is a ball pitched knee high over the inside corner of the plate. A low curve, "hooked" over the inside corner, and a fast ball, started at arm's length over the pitcher's head and angled down to the batter's knees, if judiciously mixed with a fast ball or curve, inside or out, and a competent "floater" will worry eight out of ten batters.

Slim Sallee, as an example, lasted a long while after his arm was virtually through, because his superb control enabled him to put the ball in the hardest of places to hit.

TAGGING ALL THE BASES IN THE BIG LEAGUES.

Two were out in the ninth inning with the home team one run behind when our hero, Curtis Walker, stepped to the plate and with his easy, graceful swing lofted the ball out of the park, scoring two ahead of him. The Phillies were the beneficiaries. The Pirates and Mr. Morrison the victims. Score, 8 to 5.

Danforth confined the Yanks to three hits but they were bunched after the custom of bananas in the fourth and ninth and the Browns finished second, 3 to 1. Pennock also pitched with left handed effect.

The pitching of Dauss, a triple by Cobb and a homer by Fothergill gave the Tigers 3 to 0 edge over the Athletics.

With General Gaurard in a field box and base hits falling among the Brave outfielders, the Cubs rushed Oeschger off the premises and won, 6 to 2.

The Indians rallied around twenty base hits at the expense of Ehmke and Murtay and won in a slow walk from the Red Sox, 12 to 3.

The Giants sent Benton on his left handed way in short order and easily won the third game of the series with the Reds. Score, 7 to 1.

Grimes won his first game of the year from the Cardinals, incidentally shutting them right out with a matter of four hits, the Dodgers winning 3 to 0.

Cadore's American League debut was the signal for the Senators to sharpen their batting eyes, the former Dodger being rushed against the wall in the third. The White Sox lost, perforce, 9 to 2.

Sun's Rays Generate Power.

The sun's rays are used to generate the power in a miniature engine recently demonstrated successfully in New York. A parabolic copper mirror focused the rays on a test tube full of water, making sufficient steam to work the engine.

Persistent Bees.

For 20 years a swarm of bees have occupied the back of the school clock at Micheldever, England, and no attempt at removing them has been successful, states a resident of that town. The swarm had been thought destroyed some years ago and the entrance the bees had made was cemented up, but each year they have returned, and they even bored a new hole through the cement.

Fan Observed They Were All Good Ball Players

"Last season, when I attended the 'Old Timers' Game' in Boston, I rode in a machine with Jimmy Collins, the old Boston third baseman; Pitcher Kid Nichols, Larry Lajoie, as great a second baseman as ever lived, and old Cy Young," says President John A. Heydler of the National league.

"When we got out of the car at the field, a fan, looking over our party, said, 'I wish you boys were in your prime and I was your owner. I could sell you for $1,000,000 at the prevailing prices.'"

Adversity and Friendship.

In adverse hours, the friendship of the good shines most; each prosperous day commands its friends.—Euripides.

Marble.

Marble is a product of marine sediments and volcanic fires. It is laid down on the sea bottom as shell heaps, which gradually turn into chalk. If the strata should be deeply buried in the rocks, the intense heat of the earth causes chemical elements to rearrange themselves so that they crystallize into marble. Various impurities in the chalk give the marble its various hues.

Fairy Palaces.

Do you know what fairy palaces you may build of beautiful thoughts, proof against all adversity? Bright fancies, satisfied memories, noble histories, faithful sayings, treasure houses of precious and restful thoughts, which care cannot disturb, nor pain make gloomy; houses built without hands for our souls to live in.—Ruskin.
